

Be Seen at Your Stop

Mark your calendars: Daylight Savings ends on Sunday, November 7. As the daylight starts fading earlier and the weather shifts to fall-like conditions, it can be difficult for bus operators to see you waiting at your stop. Visit the Customer Service Center at Eugene Station or ask your operator for a free pedestrian or clip-on bike light, while supplies last. Be safe and help our bus operators and other drivers see you when it is dark, foggy, or raining by following these tips:

- Stand up as the bus approaches your stop.
- Use a cell phone or light to signal the bus operator.
- Wear light-colored, bright, or reflective clothing.
- When walking, face oncoming traffic.

UO Students and Staff: Get on Board with Umo

For UO students and staff, there's a new way to ride the bus. Scan, tap, go – it's that easy to get where you want to go. Download the Umo Mobility app or get a tap card from the UO Transportation Services office to continue riding the bus for free. After November 30, LTD bus operators will no longer accept UO ID cards to board the bus.
